Travel yesterday and last night was heavy. The I. B. & W. last night hauled the St. Bernard commandery and friends to Chicago in five sleepers. There was mighty little sleeping on that train, how-ever. The Bee Line and I. & St. L. seemed to have the bulk of the excursionists, bringing in on special cars 1,192 passengers.

There seems to be a hitch in the differ-There seems to be a hitch in the differential rate arrrangement already. It is charged that St. Louis has an advantage over Cincinnati or Chicago. The sum of local rates from points west of St. Louis through to New York would, in many cases, be less than the differential, and this affords an opportunity for St. Louis to gobble business that properly belongs to her sister cities.

The local evening Vandalia train out and the morning train in are excessively crowded, especially on Saturday evenings and Monday mornings, and passengers complain that seats are not provided for at least one forth of the passengers. The question arises whether passengers, who are obliged to stand up, can be compelled to pay. An additional car between Indianapolis and Greencastie would obviate further trouble and complaint.

The I., B. & W. train on the Peoria division, leaving at 1:30 p. m. and arriving at Peoria at 9:57, will soon have a through connection west to Omaha by way of the C., B. & Q. Despite the fact that there is no through connection, this train is pay-ing $1 per mile, and with the perfection of the C., B. & Q. running arrangement, a still handsomer showing is expected. The I., B. & W. begins to show her hand. With the Baltimore and New York connection over the B. & O. and a western through outlet by way of the C., B. & Q. a grand central inter-state trunk line seems not improbable.

General Manager Henderson and General Freight Agent Diehl, of the I., B. & W., while in Cincinnati recently, perfected arrangements with the C., H. & D. management for a closer connection at this point, for Cincinnati and important results are about to follow. On the 10th the C., H. & D. time-table will be changed, and the running time between Indianapolis and Cincinnati will be cut down over thirty minutes. The 4:10 a.m. trains on the St. Louis and Peoria divisions of the I. B. & W. will, as now, make di-rect connection for Cincinnati over the C., H. & I. expedited expresses. It is now understood that a close mid-dry connection each way will be made, and the C., H. & I. will probably have at least one new train added. A mutual exchange of freight will

INGERSOLL'S LANTERN. He Liluminates the Court Room With it To-day, Hunting for au Honest Man

WASHINGTON, September 6.—Col. Ingersoll in resuming his argument this morning in the Star Route trial referred to the statement by S. W. Dersey to Post Master Gen-ment by S. W. Dorsey to Post Master General James and commented upon the fact that the prosecution had not presented that statement in evidence. The court in "For any thing the court knows it might have been a confession."

Ingersoll.—"If it had been a confession it would have been here. If one word in it was consistent with the testimony it would have been here."

The court.—"No man charged with crime." The court-"No man charged with crime

The court—"No man charged with crime can say that because he did not deny it, it is evidence of his guilt."

Ingersoll—"It is not evidence either way, but if I am charged with crime and make a written statement of my connection with the crime, and the prosecution finish the trial without showing that my statement was incorrect, it is a moral demonstration that my statement agrees with the teatimony."

onstration that my statement agrees with the testimony."

The court. "I don't see anything in it." Ingersoll, "I see a good deat in it and the jury may see something in it."

The court, "The question is this. Whether the court is going to allow an argument to be based upon a mere vacuum, wind, nothing."

Ingersoll—"That would simply be stealing the foundation of this case, vacuum." Then addressing himself to the examination of the improbability of Walsh's testimony, though he thought it had been ground to powder already, Ingersoll said, boiling Walsh's story down, it amounted to this: A rich man borrowed without necessity, and a poor broker amounted to this: A rich man borrowed without necessity, and a poor broker leaned without security. The improbability of this story would breed suspicion and incredulity itself. No man believed it; no man ever would believe it, and it was for the jury to say whether it was true or not.

Mr. Ingersoll then went on to argue that assuming Walsh's testimony to be true it sflected none of the defendants except Brady, and only went to show that he had received bribes, not that he was concerned in a conspiracy. Ingersoil then took up, and replied to the arguments of the prosecution, based on the subject of extravagance in the Star Route service. What was extravagance Route service. What was extravagance? If he paid more for a thing than it was worth, that was extravagance. If he did this thing, knowing it to be wrong, and taking a share of the surplus money, it was bribery, rascality, corruption. How did the jury know the service was extravagant? What witness had appeared to swear that he would perform the service swear that he would perform the service for a small price?

The expedition which had been complained about had been urged by members of congress, and a majority of both houses had earnestly recommended an increase of service and expedition.

The attorney general here objected that there was no such evidence; that the record of the star route investigation had not been admitted. Ingersoll admitted that he had been mistaken, and asked leave to withdraw his last remark.

The Vermont Election.

BURLINGTON, Vt. September 6.-Election returns come in slowly beyond precedent, much less than half the state having been heard from. The returns indicate a republican vote of 35,000 and a democratic publican vote of 35,000 and a democratic vote of 15,000. The vote is very light. In the second district only fifty-one towns have been heard from, less than one-half of these give Poland 7,488, Fletcher 5,452, Grout and scattering 2,802. Indications are that there is no choice which will necessitate a second election. In the first district Stewart is elected by 10,000 maintricts.

Poland's majority over all, 1,163. The twenty six tableaux cars representing ten epochs, beginning with Cincinnatus at his plow and ending with Cincinnati as it is, were all faithfully shown and the attendants tastefully, and some even gorgeously attired. The procession was in all respects a most creditable enterprise. More than three thousand mounted and uniformed men were in line. THE DAILY NEWS.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1882.

MOVEMENTS reported in Egypt this morning: Nothing.

"OH! frabjous day. Caylooh, caylay!" Vermont has gone republican.

THE court interjected some comments

now and then into the stream of Mr. Ingersoll's Star route talk yesterday, which clarified it considerably.

"Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing. More than any man in all venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in two bushels of chaff. You shall seek all day ere you find them, and when you have them they are not worth the search."

THE attempt of the German Tribune, of this city to defeat Mr. Frederick Ostermeyer, for county commissioner, because he is a member of church, and because the church element is earnestly advocating prohibiton, will recoil to Mr. Ostermeyer's advantage. The liquorites seem to be going daft all around.

WE rise to repeat that the correct plural of "Knight Templar" is "Knights Templars." The word "templar" is a noun, and the plural can only be formed by adding the letter "a." There is not a historical writer, an encyclopedia, a lexicon nor any other authority that forms the plural other than "Knights Templars."—[The Times.

It is not the plural that is bothering the Knights Templar or the Knights Templars, but the banner; that those Sarah Bernhart Knights-or St. Bernard Knights of Chicago should come down here and walk off with the banner in the face of every intimation of desire to the contrary, is a larger subject for consideration just now than a crooked little letter "s."

CHICAGOED! (This was written before the announcement of the result of the prize drill and was intended to apply equally in any case; but the application would have fitted the point of the observation much more satisfactorily could it be written that it was the Chicago folks who were Chicagoed. But in truth these gentlemen seem to have well deserved the success they achieved. It was an honorable victory and represented zeal and industry in that thoroughness of preparation which is so characteristic of Chicago. Had our men prepared themselves as carefully they would in all probability have retained the banner.)

If this is "pertinently" true, then why do The News and the Herald oppose the aubmission of that amendment to "a-vote of the electors of the state," in accordance with its direct terms?—[Indianapolis Jour-

Speaking for itself, The News is unaware that the preamble to any act of a law-making body has any effect upon the act other than as explanatory, and when it does not explain, but conflicts, then it is of no effect at all. It is still further unaware that a joint resolution of the general assembly still inchoate, not yet a law, but merely in process of formation, and under constitutional limitations which provide for its death while still in the formation process, is of any effect whatever upon anybody. If our esteemed contemporary has made these discoveries it has, indeed, found something new under the sun. In any event we congratulate it upon its accession of respect for the legislature, while we may have to condole with it that the gentlemen who penned the preamble aforesaid are first of record as to the discovery of the "submission" policy. It is relevant further to add that The News does not oppose the submission of the frequently aforementioned amend ments in the sense which its esteemed contemporary implies. It opposes the separation of a process of law-making from the law itself, and the attempt to make an issue out of the process which, already guaranteed by the constitution, can not rightfully be an issue at all. LOUISIANA'S new election law is such as ought to make republican government "gasp and stare." It was bad enough when in those days of carpet-bag rule a returning board had to be created to purge the ballot box of blood and fraud. It was an extreme remedy, but it was to meet an extreme disease, and the disease was the worse. No one ever assumed that the ballot boxes of Louisiana represented the will of the people of the state, and the returning board simply approximated that will a little more, and rendered the fraud a little less violent. The democrats who were by this device cheated of their swindling in the election of 1876, continued to use it for their own advantage. But now they have, to use the language of the game, "seen it, and gone considerably better," in the law passed by the legislature, and recently signed by the governor against the protests of respectable democrats. The law provides that no ballot is legal, none will be received by the commissioners, or counted by the board which makes up the returns, unless it is printed on paper furnished by the secretary of state, and so distinguished from all other paper as to be readily and unerringly identified. In other words, it is for the secretary of state, a partisan officer, to say who shall cast a vote in Louisiana from this time forth. We cannot think, just now, of any words to add to this simple statement. Let people ponder it. Think of it as for Indiana, for instance. Conceive that at the coming election next November no ballot could be cast in Indiana except such as had been given out by Dr. Hawn, for controlling the paper controls the ballot. We presume, too, it is optional with the secretary entirely as to whom he shall give ballots!

The usually accurate Philadelphia Record has the following editorial deliverance:

In the event of Folger's nomination for governor, John C. New, of Indiana, is the man upon whom rumor fixes as his probable successor at the head of the treasury. This selection would be in accordance with the practical politics of which President Arthur is so accomplished a master. With New in control of the treasury he would strengthen the lines of the republican party in Indiana as well as his own. New is an adept in machine politics, and would make an able coadjutor of Secretary Chandler when the time comes for manipulating the next national republican convention. New and Chendler were among the most effective opponents of Conkling, Arthur and the rest of the third-term leaders in the Chicago convention. Chandler is already detached from Blaine, and in the whirligig of politics it will not be surprising if both are found conducting the movement for the nomination of Arthur for President in 1884.

The Great Change in New York.

The work of turning New York from a city of private, individual dwellings houses into one of tenements, each inhabited by large numbers of families, is now going on more rapidly than ever. It will not take many years to make the city very closely reaemble Paris, for instance, in that respect. A comparatively small number of people will have houses to themselves—hotels, as they call them in Paris. The great mass of the population, poor and well to do, will be crowded in tenements.

Already the great majority of the people.

Already the great majority of the peo-ple of the city live in tenements, either those so called, or in apartment houses, which are the same thing made more ele-gant and more convenient. Add to these telement houses at the rate of a thousand a year, and their total will soon be enough to accommodate not half and more, but two-thirds and three quarters of the people; even all except a small fraction.

During the first six months of this year
1 260 buildings, of an estimated cost of $27,300,305, were undertaken in New York. Of these 322 were flat houses, 228 tenements, and 106 tenements with stores. Nearly half of the money spent in building was laid out on these classes of structures.

A Dakota Snake Story. [Fargo special Globe-Democrat.]
Just after the close of a circus performance this afternoon, a huge boa constrictor and python made their escape from their cage, and, not having been fed for two or three days, seized upon a young camel and crushed it to death in an instant. One of them went for a beautiful Indian antelope, and would have killed it in a moment, but a number of circus men came to the rescue with pitchforks and goads and drove rescue with pitchforks and goads and drove the serpent into a corner. Jennie Hickey, the young girl who acts as snake charmer, and has charge of the monsters, was sum-moned and struck the largest snake twice with her whip. He darted furiously at her, twirled himself around her, and in a sec-ond or two would have crushed her in his coils, as he had the baby came!, but with great presence of mind she drew the long, keen knife she always carries for such emergencies, and cut the huge reptile in two. It was a narrow escape, and the girl was greeted with a round of applause when she came into the ring to-night.

Enlarging Paris.

The destruction of the fortifications of Paris will add a large habitable area to the city. The space either actually occupied by the fortifications or reserved in connec-tion with them comprises 3,375 acres. In addition to the direct advantage which would be derived from opening this do-main to settlement, the bill recently in-troduced in the chamber points out that the masony of the wall would build thousands of houses in which persons with small income would find comfortable homes, with abundant air and light, at a low price.

The claim that Indiana was carried by the protectionist rush is not conceded, though Senator Voorhees seems to have re-ceived a severe shock. The state was car-ried because the democratic candidate for vice president was the weakest who could bave been selected and represented a dis-sension and a disappointment, and the re-publicans were led with great ability by Harrison and Porter and wonderfully organized by Dudley; and means used to bring every vote to the polls.

A FATHER'S CURSES

n a Fair Woman Who Led His Sen to Buin-A Scene Upon a Louisville Street. Only the other day as a reporter of the Louisville Commercial, strolling out Sixth street, neared Broadway, a most singular scene presented itself by him. An elderly gentlemen of respectable appearance, wearing a long gray beard, with a care-worn face, was talking earnestly to a bandsome, fashionably-dressed woman, She, however, seemed to be trying to avoid him. Without seeking to discover the subject of the conversation, the reporter came near enough to hear the oid gentleman using toward her the most abusive language, even pronouncing words which are never addressed to a lady in politic society though to this circle bath parlite society, though to this circle both parties belonged, to judge from their appearance. The man's manner suddenly became more excited and he seemed to be frenzied. Just then a passing carrisge came near them, and the lady hailed the driver, gol inside the vehicle and asked to be driver up Broadway, seemingly much relieved at escaping from her tormentor. The old gentleman's appearance was not such as to indicate him as a good subject for an inter indicate nim as a good suppose and the reporter allowed him to turn and walk back to Sixth street without questioning him, and without an idea of what tioning him, and without an idea of what could have induced him to be so rude to a lady on the street.

The sequel of this strange happening came out yesterday, when the reporter be-came possessed of a secret well worth relating. The reporter met a lady acquaint ance on Fourth street, yesterday afternoon. whom he joined for a stroll of a square of two. While halting on a corner for a moment his eye rested upon the occupant of a carriage, which had likewise paused for a carriage, which had likewise paused for a temporary blockade in the street, and this occupant was the lady who had figured in the singular scene at Sixth and Broadway, few days previous. The reporter, as the carriage moved on, mentioned to his companion what he had seen and heard, when he found that she was acquainted with the history of the lady in the carriage and of hear singular presenter. her singular persecutor. Only upon a solemn promise not to use the names of the parties—for all are connected with the best ociety in the city-did she consent to make the secret known.

"You newspaper men," said the re-porter's companion, "are so unfeeling in power's companion, "are so unfeeling in publishing people's private history that I'm almost afraid to reveal the facts in this case. But if you do print their names it will only add to this lady's continued an-

Then she told the story. Ten or twelve years ago a young lady and young gentleman in Louisville society met and became mutually interested. They had both been the children of wealthy parents, had en-joyed the best educational advantages and opportunities, and their prospective mar-risge was looked for be a happy event. The yourg gentleman was already looked upon as a successfal man of the world, and the lady of his choice was regarded as a the lady of his choice was regarded as a fit companion for so worthy a husband, should they be married. She was fond of society and its pleasures, while he was of a more retiring disposition, and it was only through his attachment to the young lady that he ever entered into any gaiety.

A short time before the proposed marriage the young lady's parents gave au elegant entertainment in honor of her birthday, and her affianced lover was in-vited. He joined in the dance, at her request, and was herese rt to the supper-room. Here were spread choice viands, and wines flowed in abundance. A toast was proposed to health of the fair hostes The glasses were filled to their brims. But the bostess' lover declined the one offered him, saying that he never took wine. "Just this one glass," she pleaded, and in such a fascinating manner that to refuse was be youd his nower. Having broken his habit of temperance, it was not so difficult for him to be persuaded to drink the next treast offered, and so he went on until, at the close of the entertainment he had to be rom that evening dated the downfall of the once moral and cultured young man. He drank whenever asked to, and with such bad effects that in less than a year he was a common drunks. The marriage engagement came to an end and his former betrothed became the bride of another suitor. The son that was once the pride of fond parents became a disgrace to their home, and the sorrowing mother went to her grave in consequence.

The bereaved father cursed the fair temptress who, he claimed, had brought ruin and disgrace to his family. This was years ago, but the old man still lives, and with bowed head may often be seen upon the streets. And he never sees the lady in question that he does not approach her and recall the circumstances that have caused so much pain and sorrow. The life of the lady has been made more miserable than can be described. She has eldom ventured upon the street alone, and the scene the reporter had witnessed a few days before, his informant said, was but a repetition of what had occurred, now and then, for years.

The ruined son still lives, but in a distant city, where he leads a degraded life.

There are those who say that the brokenhearted father is insane, but there are no many who know his secret.

Among recently discovered donuments

Among recently discovered documents is a series of resolutions secretly adopted by the Texas secession convention of Feb ruary 4, 1861, proposing a southwestern confederacy, to include Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas, New Mexico and Arizona. To negotiate for the formation of such a confederacy three commissioners were appointed, whose credentials were signed by the president of the convention, O. M. Roberts, the present governor of Texas. The commissioners were also empowered to nego-tiate for an alliance with the Choctaw, Chickas aw, Cherokee, Creek and Seminole Indians.

A writer for the Boston Herald went to a matinee performance of "Pinafore," and found that he was half the paying audience as he was the only person in the dollar part of the house, while the ten others were in the tencent gallery. "This made me arrogant," he says. "I scornfully repelled an ofter of my dollar back, and explained to the manager that the matter betwirt him and me was in the nature of a con-tract; that he was, in law and honor, bound him and me was in the nature of a contract; that he was, in law and honor, bound to have 'Pinafore' performedebefore me. I refused all advances toward a compromise, A whole proscenium box for that evening had no temptation. My case was founded on equity and I triumphed. The orchestra, outnumbering me nine to one, played an overture conscientiously, and when Sir Joseph came on board with his sisters, cousins and aunts, I found myself confronted by an assemblage of thirty-four persons. I felt my dread responsibility as an audience, with all the applause and hisses practically at my command. What could I do if that company and orchestra should take a notion to turn and read me? I fancy that I gave no outward token of fear, however, but leaned back brazenly in my chair and tried to do my whole duty. When Josephine cut her 'suitor-lowly-born' song short by two verses I stamped, elapped and cried 'hi-yi' until she gave me the rest for an encore; when Sir Joseph and Dick Deadeye took no pains to be funny I brought them up to their work with a hiss; when Little Buttercup sang the whole of her first song without leaving out a word or a bit of the business I applauded wildly, and when Hebe came out into the auditorium to sit down and expostulate with me I said: "Go back behind the footlights and earn your sale ry, Miss Sinclair. It makes no difference to you whether there's only one of me or 500. I'm getting my dollar's worth, and you're earning your $50 a week—or less." Thus the entertainment was concluded to the auditor's satisfaction. Must Pay or Drop.

A Reminiscence of Slavery Days. To the Editor of The Indianapolis News:

The death of Moses Broyles calls to mind a little incident which occurred at the lit-tle brick church on the canal a short time the brick church on the canal a short time before he became pastor of it. Richard Kelley, a noted Baptist minister and an abolitionist, at a time when it cost something to be one, was a member of the legislature of 1853, and as that little church was without a pastor, he supplied them during his stay in the city. In the winter of 1855 he was again in the city in company with a number of his friends and neighbors. They were guests at my house, and when Suaday came he announced his intention to go and worship with his colored friends of that little church. Two of the company accompanied him. They arrived early, and, taking seats near the door, awaited the coming of the congregation. As soon, the coming of the congregation. As soon, however, as they began to assemble they also began to eye the three white gentlemen with a suspicious look, and after collecting in groups outside and discussing the situation, appointed two of their num-ber to wait upon them and inquire their business at that particular time, which, business at that particular time, which, they were assured, was to worship God with them; but no protestation or explanation would satisfy that timid people, and they were assured that the people would not come into the house until they withdrew. They retired, Elder Kelley to be roundly rallied by his antiabolition friends, that his colored friends had gone back on him. If any one who was present on that occasion reads this the occurrence very likely will be remembered. was present on that occasion reads this the occurrence very likely will be remembered. We can rejoice with them that those times are forever past, but can not realize the fact as they realize it. The God whom Moses Broyles worshipped, by the agency of good men forever blotted out that infamous fugitive slave law.

A Lesson Readily Learned.

London Telegraph. While one of the Bosniac delegates who withe one of the bosinic delegates who waited upon the emperor Franz Josef at the Hofburg, a few weeks ago, was staying in Vienna, the owner of the hotel in which he lodged became a bankrupt. Hearing of his host's mishap the worthy Beg sought an explanation of the term "bankrupt," and having thoroughly meatered, it mean an explanation of the term "bankrupt," and having thoroughly mastered its meaning, proceeded, on his return to his native viliage, to impart his information to sundry of the faithful, his near relatives and close family connections. "This, O my brothers," he observed, "is the true and proper way to become a bankrupt. First, you must hire a shop, then you must write to rich merchants in far-distant cities, inviting them to forward their wares to you to rich merchants in far-distant cities, in-viting them to forward their wares to you for sale, and pledging yourself to pay them in a few months. As soon as you shall have received sufficient merchandise you must sell it for cash or hide it carefully away. Then must you go to the judge and say to him; 'Beloved of Allah! I am a bankrupt. Here are £5. They are all I have in the world. The judge will keep £4 of the £5 and proclaim you in bankruptcy. The other £1 will be divided among those who supplied you with goods. Later on you will remove to another town and begin this good and easy business over again. Thus may the passing bitterness of insolvency be converted into the abiding aweetness of a comfortable independence. Bechesm! Upon my head be it!"

Detroit Ignorance.

Detroit Free Press. The proprietor of a Woodward avenue store, which had been finelly decorated in honor of the Knights of Pythias, was at his door yesterday, when an old man lounged "Such ignorance I never saw in all my life! You see that man there—the one with the white hat on?"

"Yes."
"Well, he was having a good deal to say, and I saked him who Pythias was. Would you believe it, he couldn't answer me?" 'C-couldn't he?" stammered the citizen. "No, sir, he couldn't. Think of such gnorance in this enlightened age? When I told him who Pythias was he called me a liar. Now I want to prove that I'm right,
You come over and tell him all about it."
"But I—I can't leave."

"Then I'll bring him over here."

'No, you needn't—I'm busy."

"I see you sre, but when a man calls me liar I want to prove that I ain't, I'll have a liar I want to prove that I ain't. I'll have him over in a minute."

He hadn't crossed the street before the merchant slid into the store and hurried up stairs to keep out of sight for an hour, and it was only after he was certain that the old man had departed that he slipped down and consulted Webster's dictionary to find out whether Pythias was a town, a man, or a temple on a hill.

Spirited Fisticuffs.

There was a spirited fight last evening on North Pennsylvania street, between John P. Smith, of Terre Haute, representing Baldwin's music house, Robert L. Carlin, with Pfs filin & Co., and Will M. Carlin, with Emil Wulschner. The princi-pels were really Smith and the senior Car-lin, and Will Carlin, it appears, simply in-teriered to protect his father. The diffiterfered to protect his father. The difficulty originated over a business transaction, in discussing which Smith called Carlin a liar and the latter responded with a blow. In this engagement the elder Carlin was wersted, but the tables were slightly turned upon the arrival of Will. The fight, being in the early part of the evening, attracted a great crowd, all the frequenters of the New Denison rushing across the street to swell the circle. While the melee was at its hight, John Gonsolus, of Chicago, attempted to act as peace-maker and was chased up the stairway by Mr. Smith, who drew his revolver and threatened to use it. After this little episode Smith renewed the assault upon the elder Carlin, who by this assault upon the elder Carlin, who by this time was practically hors du combat, and he would have inflicted serious injury but for the well-timed interference of Otto H. Hasselman, who seized him and practically compelled a cessation of hostilities. To day, before 'Squire Pease, the elder Carlin pleaded guilty to assault, and Smith to provoke, and both were fined. Will Carlin and Smith were also brought before the acting mayor, but after a hearing both were discharged.

RAPER DEFEATED.

Bernard Commandery, of Chicago Wins the Champion Knight Templa Banner-A Scene of Excitement-A Gentle Criticism.

There was much doubt yesterday, after the drill between St. Bernard Commandery, of Chicago, and Raper Commandery, of Indianapolis, which would be declared winner. It was generally admitted that rether commandery had shown perfection, and it was thought that the score of the judges would show but little difference. The judges, after the contest, repaired to the New-Denison hotel to make up their decision. At 7 o'clook, the hour set for their report, the lobby of the hotel was jammed. The excitement was at fever heat. All sorts of speculations were heat. All sorts of speculations were indulged in, the friends of Raper maintaining that Raper would continue to hold the champion banner. There was an hold the champion banner. There was an hour's delay pending the arrival of Raper, and in the meantime the judges, D. A. Montfort, of St. Paul, Minn., Captain Frank R. Davis, of Chicago, and Major James R. Ross, of Indianapolis, appeared in the crowd. People with auxiety written all over their faces pressed about them, but they made no sign, although it was whispered in the crowd that a dispatch had gone off to Chicago declaring that St. Bernard had won. At 8 o'clock Raper Bernard had won. At 8 o'clock Raper Commandery appeared, headed by Colonel Ruckle, and the three judges at once mounted the office counter of the hotel and Mr. Montomce counter of the notel and Mr. Mont-fort announced the decision, prefacing it with a statement of the onerous duties of the judges and their disposition to act bon-estly. He also stated that there were forty six numbers on the program, and that the com-manderies were marked on a scale of ten for perfection for each movement, making He then reported the following score: St. Bernard was then declared the win-There was a dead silence for two seconds, when one of the St. Bernard men sent his cap into the atmosphere with a loud screech of exul-tation. He struck the keynote and the the atmosphere with a loud screech of exultation. He struck the keynote and the next instant the uproar was simply tremendous. The St. Bernard band struck up "Glory Hallelujah!" The men yelled. A score of caps went to the ceiling. Every fellow fell on every other fellows neck. Capt. Purinton, who commanded St. Bernard, was lifted upon the shoulders of the men and borne through the throng. The din continued for several minutes and there was a rush for the libation cup. Cheers were kindly given for Raper, and Austin H. Brown, on the part of the latter proposed a similar compliment to St. Bernard and their ladies, which was given as heartily as could have been expected under the circumstances. The appearance of the Raper men, however, was to put it mildly, a trifie disconsolate. They looked as though they had been hit very hard in an unexpected place. They had nothing to say, and little of that. The score showed a very decisive defeat. The St. Bernard commandery left for home at 11 o'clock, the banner in the meantime having been turned over to its care at Raper headquarters. St. Bernard went to the depot without being escorted by Raper, an omission in courtesy that has been commented upon to-day; though it must be remembered that Raper was not feeling well. The decision is singular in some respects. St. Bernard completed forty movements and Raper thirty-six men and the latter forty-one. It and Raper thirty-six. The former drilled thirty-six men and the latter forty-one. It therefore required more time for the Rape therefore required more time for the Raper to complete many of the movements than St. Bernard. According to the score, St. Bernard made 367 out of a possible 460, (forty movements) and Raper 323% out of a possible 360 (thirty-six movements.) On this basis St. Barnard gave, by these points, a better drill than the Chickasaws, during the July encampment, something which was not apparent to the average spectator. Gen. was not apparent to the average spectator. Gen. Carnahan, who was in a position to closely observe the dril', says he can not, for the life of him, understand the decision. He says that Raper ought to have won. The home commandery was far superior in preserving distance and in alignment. He says that Col. Rackle made no errors, but that the St. Bernard commander brought his men to a halt, and, without giving the command front, ordered "about face," and the entire commandery obeyed. He says Raper's common time and double face," and the entire commandery obeyed. He says Raper's common time and double time movements were executed with the full stop, and St. Bernard's were not. He cites half a dozen points in which Raper excelled, and is completely mystified as to the system of marking which could have brought St. Bernard out ahead. It was also observed by many that Col. Ruckle gave an absolutely honest drill, without icokewing lutely honest drill, without jockeying, never cutting a movement short when a break threatened.

It is probable that St. Bernard will have its hands full attending to challenges between now and next fall. Col. George W. Northrup, of De Molay commandery, Louisville, last night notified the Chicago commandery that his drill corps would send them a challenge, and it is reported that Dayton and Rochester wish to make a struggle for the banner. Col. Ruckle said this morning that so far as Raper was concerned, the matter would remain in abeyance until next Tuesday night, when the question of challenging St. Bernard would be determined at the regular meeting of the commandery. He had no criticisms to make upon the decision. St. Bernard drilled by Grant's tactics and Raper nard drilled by Grant's tactics and Raper by Ruckle's, which is closely akin to Up-ton's. Meyer's tactics have been recog-nized by the Illinois commanderies hereofore.

The knights from Cincinnati and Louisville wanted Raper to win.

First it was the Light Infantry, next the Knights of Pythias, now Raper.

A banner of flowers was presented St. Bernard commandery by the ladies of Raper, on the grounds, Col. Northrup, of Louisville officiating. It seemed to pressage the defeat of Raper.

The morning papers in stating that the Raper reception committee failed to meet St. Bernard commandery at the depoty yes. St. Bernard commandery at the depot yes-terday morning, are in error. The com-mandery with its officers was met by the committee and escorted to the hotel. The drill corps went to the exposition grounds to drill immediately on the arrival of the train, on their part waiving ceremony, but the courtesy was duly extended the commanders as a body
